

How The Reutlinger Community is Taking Precautions to Prevent Coronavirus (COVID-19)

Currently, there are no reported or suspected cases of the Coronavirus (COVID-19) among our residents, associates, families, vendors or visitors.

We are monitoring and proactively taking steps as recommended by state and local health officials as well as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Dedicated Plant Operations and Housekeeping teams are working to ensure our community is clean, safe and disinfected regularly.

Additionally, restrictions are in place for any visitor who has a fever, new cough or difficulty breathing, or if they or someone they know has recently traveled to China, the Middle East or Italy.

As a health care facility, we have already been on high alert during this year's influenza season and have been adhering to infection control protocols to successfully prevent spread of the flu; many of these protocols are the same procedures we would follow to take precautions for COVID-19.

"As always, the health and safety of our residents and associates are our first priorities, says Jay Zimmer, President and CEO of The Reutlinger Community. We are taking this situation very seriously and are implementing preventive measures across our community. We are committed to maintaining the highest standards of safety for our residents, staff and community."
